

Democrats are gaining strength in Virginia.
So much strength, that they win overwhelmingly under either map.

The Democratic share of the vote in recent statewide elections (blue line) has been steadily increasing. Projected seat share under the 2011 Enacted map (solid black line) and the 2019 Special Master map (dashed black line) were obtained for each election by aggregating precinct-level results. Note that, in a single-member district system such as the House of Delegates, a discrepancy between vote share and seat share (also known as the “winners’ bonus”) is expected. It is not at all unusual for the seat margin to be double that of the vote margin, as in the 2017 and 2018 elections shown here. Electoral precinct data and maps were compiled by the Princeton Gerrymandering Project. Electoral data was used from 2016 Presidential, 2017 Governor, Lt. Governor, Atty. Gen., and 2018 U.S. Senator races.
